"This book offers a unique interpretation of traditional workshop instruction by showing teachers how to integrate their separate reading and writing workshops into one "literacy workshop" (periodically and as dictated by student needs) that takes advantage of the inherent reciprocity between reading and writing. Through narrative discussions, student samples, photographs, instructional resources, writer's notebook, suggested lesson and course senate ideas, the book explains the structure of the literacy workshop, tells teachers how to get started with it, and offers teacher's take on what this is and means the book workshop really is. The book is divided into five parts. Part I (Chapters 1-9) describes the foundation and gives the nuts and bolts of literacy workshop. Part II (Chapters 10-19) includes engaging case/studies/topics focused on demonstrating essence - which includes a primary and an intermediate level example from its own Big Book

It represents a systematic effort to apply a common set of scholarly lenses to a range of important topics in teacher education. The Panel's charge was to "create for the larger educational research community a thorough analysis, coherent understanding of the research evidence relevant to larger policy and practice issues for teacher education in the U.S., and to propose a comprehensive agenda related to teacher education research and development in the United States and abroad". The panel worked over the course of one year to answer these questions and to produce a series of recommendations, including teacher training, curriculum, research design and methods, and research dissemination.
